The bay of Livadi, where we dock, is magnificently dominated by Chora, the capital of the island, one of the most typical and endearing Cycladic villages. You might be lucky enough to be able to visit the fortified Taxiarchon Monastery (16th century) if the solitary monk who lives there is available. Return to Chora by the mountain before a sumptuous descent on a paved path taken by the workers of the iron mines of Serifos. Descent by bus or on foot to the bay of Livadi.

Weather

The climate of the islands is Mediterranean, that is to say, hot and dry in summer and mild and rainy in winter, but with significant differences depending on the regions and archipelagos. The Cyclades regularly suffer from lack of rain and during the beautiful season, which lasts here almost 6 months, precipitation is scarce or even completely absent from the end of May to the beginning of October. The Cyclades also benefit from relatively cool summers (for Greece) thanks to the famous "Meltem", a seasonal wind which during the summer season pleasantly refreshes the atmosphere, but which sometimes gets carried away to the point of immobilizing the boats in the port. for a few hours.
